Hello Halden team,

I’d like to be considered for the Senior Product Designer position. I’ve spent my career on products where a confusing screen has real consequences, a missed referral or a blocked account, and I’ve learned to design for the busiest day, not the demo.

At Tidewell I redesigned the clinician dashboard together with nurses and front-desk staff. We tested every iteration in clinics rather than in the office, and the final version became the default view for all new clinics.

Your posting mentions accessibility and a growing design system. Both have been central to my last two roles, and I’d be glad to share examples.

Best regards,

Jonas Weber
